FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

Today's readings offer an uncomfortable, but clear challenge to us as we recall this past week's anniversary of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks: the challenge of forgiveness.

We are not to be vengeful; we are to forgive. "The vengeful will suffer the Lord's vengeance, for He remembers their sins in detail." Sirach writes. But as for us, we must forgive: "Forgive your neighbor's injustice; then when you pray, your own sins will be forgiven." It is important to remember, however, that forgiving another does not mean absolving them of responsibility. To forgive another is to confirm that they have done wrong and need forgiveness. Mercy does not cancel out justice or the need for conversion, but it does open a path of charity that encourages and promotes conversion and justice.

The message of our Gospel is that God forgives us not because we deserve it, but because God is merciful. Yet, when that servant does not extend the same forgiveness to others, he gets himself into trouble, for he has not acted toward others the way the master acted toward him. We are called to forgive those who sin against us. This message is made clear by Peter's question to Jesus, "Lord, if my brother sins against me, how often must I forgive him? As many as seven times?" Jesus answers, "Not seven times but seventy-seven times" (Mt. 18:21-22).

But there is great wisdom in Jesus' words about forgiveness. Our human experience tells us that when we hold on to anger and hatred, it eats away at us. It can begin to change us and make us into a person we never wanted to be. In some ways, forgiveness frees the one who forgives from carrying that burden. We can let it go and entrust the other to God who is better able to deal with them. The teaching on forgiveness is about being like God, who is merciful. It is about recognizing something of ourselves in those who commit the greatest evils, for no one is free of sin. It's about being able to live with the peace of love instead of hate, which tears and destroys.

Jesus is not urging us simply to be passive in the face of evil. We must still work to protect the innocent and to hold those who perpetrate crimes against humanity accountable. But at the same time, we are called to forgive even while asking, in love, how we can move forward in truth and love. Forgiveness requires that we address the situation in a positive and loving way, instead of with fear and hatred.

This may be a hard message to hear, but Jesus' words today are challenging us in a big way. When something that is dearest to us has been attacked, how will we respond? The Gospel challenges us to consider what a Christian response might be. Our response will have long-lasting implications for us as people and as a society.

God bless you, Fr. Stan
