FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

In the gospel passage, Matthew tells a story in which God is the landowner and we are the tenants in his vineyard. Again, the landowner provides everything - the land, the vines, a hedge, a wine press, and a watchtower. But the tenants refuse to turn over the produce, instead choosing to kill the landowner's servants - and even his son - rather than give back to the landowner what is rightfully his.

It's easy to blame God for the problems in our world, in our neighborhoods, and in our relationships. After all, He is all-powerful, and therefore can bring about any changes He wants. And that means that if there is something lacking, it must be because God is not providing it, right? I think you know the answer.

My friends, if the parish isn't as good as it could be, maybe I need to work a little harder, a little more faithfully or be a little more attentive to the needs of the community. And if my friendships or family relationships are less than they could be, maybe I need to be a little more understanding of forgiving or accepting of others. If my preaching at Mass is somewhat ineffective, maybe I need to spend a little more time preparing rather than trying to throw something together at the last minute. Or if there are hungry people in this world, maybe I should feed somebody. Or if the world is an angry, violent place, maybe I need to be more peaceful and kinder. And if people are poor and in need of much, maybe I need to be a little more generous.

In other words, if I'm part of the reason that the world isn't as God wants it to be, then I need to be part of the solution. God has given and continues to give us every single thing we need to make this world the beautiful place He created it to be. It's not that God needs to do more. I need to do more. We all need to do more - give more, love more and care more.

This doesn't mean that we can solve every problem by trying harder or cure every ill simply by working toward that end. Many things involve the freedom of others, and for things to be different in our lives and in the world, it will often require that others try too. But we should never underestimate what our families can do when we work together, or never underestimate the potential of a community of faith such as ours.

It takes faith to believe in a world of abundance, a world in which God provides every single thing we need. But that's who we are. And so maybe the question 'What more was there to do for my vineyard that I had not done?' isn't God's question at all. Maybe it needs to be ours. And maybe each of us needs to answer it honestly..

God bless you, Fr. Stan
